

Chris is the president and founder of Blacktop Bootcamp, Incorporated. He began his high performance driving career in 1995 taking over a dozen high performance driving schools at various tracks around the east coast. He has also done drag racing, autocrossing, Solo 2 competition and even competed in the grueling One Lap of America.

Chris obtained his competition racing license with the Sports Car Club of America in 1997 where he currently competes in American Sedan. In that time he has earned an SCCA regional championship and many, many podium finishes and race wins. He has driven dozens of tracks around the world as a student, an instructor, a journalist and a racer.

Since 1997 Chris has also been instructing high performance and advanced driving schools. As an in-car and lead classroom instructor he has taught hundreds of teens and adults life-saving driving skills. It is here that he picked up his passion for instructing the Driving Arts™.

In 2004 Chris began his law enforcement career where he continues today. After working many senseless and often heart breaking crashes with teens, he has seen first hand the effects of poor driving skill and judgment. It is this experience that drove him to found Blacktop Bootcamp.

To that end Blacktop Bootcamp's mission is to try to save lives through better education in a hands-on, positive learning environment.
